NUS, NTU among top 35 in world for MBA programmes

THE National University of Singapore (NUS) and Nanyang Technological University (NTU) have made it to the top 35 in a global ranking of business schools’ Master of Business Administration (MBA) programmes.

The Financial Times’ Global MBA Ranking, released yesterday, placed NUS at 23rd, while NTU was 34th.

The rankings are based on data from business schools and their alumni, and take into account the career progression of the school’s alumni, diversity of students and faculty and the generation of ideas.

Salary and its increases three years after graduation also make up 20 per cent of a school’s rank.
