Let words take off

Enjoy live readings with music and discuss the act of creating fiction, film and song at the Nanyang Technological University’s first literary festival, Lines Of Flight. Among those taking the mike are NTU’s writers-in-residence: local poet Grace Chia Krakovic, and US-born travel writer and novelist Timothy O’Grady (both left), recently appointed to the post. Chia Krakovic will read from her newest, still-to-be published work, while O’Grady will read from his celebrated coming-of-age tale, I Could Read The Sky.

Where: NTU School of Humanities and Social Sciences, 14 Nanyang Drive MRT: Pioneer When: Tomorrow, 11am - 9pm Admission: Free Info: Register online at english.hss.ntu.edu.sg/CreativeWritingProgramme/Pages/LinesOfFlightLiteraryFestival.aspx