

ASIAONE >> NEWS >> EDVANTAGE

Lee Kong Chian School of Medicine hopes to train clinician scientists

Photo: ST

By Amelia Teng
The Straits Times
Monday, Mar 11, 2013

Professor Dermot Kelleher spoke to the media for the first time on Monday morning ahead of the Lee Kong Chian School of Medicine's opening this July. The school at Nanyang Technological University is set up in partnership with Imperial London College. Classes will start on Aug 5, and the first intake of 54 students will undergo a five-year undergraduate medical degree programme.

THE STRAITS TIMES

Get the full story from The Straits Times.

Share:

0

0

0

Share

Tweet

Share

LATEST NEWS

- ▶ Hebei to help Beijing fight sandstorms
- ▶ Malaysia face uphill task against Australia in top-of-the-table clash
- ▶ Golden day for Malaysia at Asian Cycling Championships
- ▶ Road to world title full of pitfalls for Chong Wei
- ▶ N Korea cuts off military hotline with South
- ▶ Sabah pullout talks begin
- ▶ Chinese business man pays $125 for 3 packets of tissue
- ▶ Rescued Rohingya refugees remanded
- ▶ Rohingyas leave homeland only to face uncertain fate at sea
- ▶ KLIA2 may face further delays, claim Pakatan MPs