NTU-JTC tie-up on transport research

Transport operator SMRT yesterday signed an agreement with Nanyang Technological University (NTU) and JTC to research how buses and trains can “seamlessly integrate” with new transport modes such as autonomous vehicles.

An app that will allow commuters to plan journeys around these various modes of transport will also be developed.

NTU is expected to pump $3 million into the project – which will see its campus and the neighbouring CleanTech Park serve as a 250ha test bed – over the next three years.
