Fresh shot at life spurs cancer survivor to be national archer

Keller Chai, 2L, spent a good part of her childhood in hospital after being diagnosed with leukaemia. Weak and sickly for many years, she decided four years ago that she would no longer hold back by her illness. The national archer tells The Straits Times about her journey “from the bottom”.

If anyone had told Miss Keller Chai’s younger sister that she would one day be a competitive archer, she would have laughed it off.

The childhood cancer survivor has turned her life around through a physical education degree in her life, she is now a commissioned officer.

“Tens years back, when I was young and in primary school, I was told that I would never be able to do physical activities and that I would have to spend the rest of my days being on bed rest,” said the Nanyang Technological University postgraduate.

Suffering from leukaemia when she was just a year old, the young girl underwent several rounds of chemotherapy and surgery, and ended up in hospital for almost two years.
