The Minor in Communication Studies is open to all students in NTU except students from the School of Communication and Information.

In the rapidly evolving world of info-comm and media technology, it is important to understand the workings and socio-cultural implications of a knowledge-driven society. The Minor in Communication Studies will expose students to a more holistic curriculum in a rigorous academic environment.

Requirements
A total of 15 AUs or 16 AUs shall constitute a Minor in Communication Studies and may be obtained over the duration of the student’s respective degree course. To fulfill this requirement, the student must take 3 subjects of 4 AUs each in addition to one compulsory subject CS100 Fundamentals of Communication Studies, at 3 AUs. A minimum Grade B from the CS100 final examination is required for students to continue with the Minor programme.

Alternatively, students may read CS101 Introduction to Communication Studies at 4 AUs as the core subject instead of CS100. A minimum Grade C from CS101 final examinations is required for students to continue with the Minor programme. In this case, a total of 16 AUs shall constitute a Minor in Communication Studies.

The AUs obtained for the minor subjects can be counted towards fulfillment of General Elective requirements.