

Momentum to develop Singapore women in tech community picks up
Techgoondu, 22 March 2021

This year, there were more events on the national level to recognise achievements and contributions of women in tech on International Women's Day (IWD) which fell on March 8.

At the Nanyang Technological University, new efforts were announced to connect women with role models and mentors, conduct local research to address barriers and gaps, and provide education opportunities.

Called Powers (Promotion of Women in Engineering, Research, and Science) and organised by Women@NTU, it was launched by President Halimah Yacob on March 8. Other companies like Singtel also held their own IWD celebrations.
