

Making machines smart

From voice-activated home assistants to personalised recommendations on streaming services, artificial intelligence (AI) is powering our everyday experiences. By analysing large amounts of data to identify patterns and predict outcomes with lightning speed, AI can help us save money, work smarter, make better decisions, reduce the toll of human error and more. Researchers at NTU are exploring these transformative technologies and finding ways that AI can serve us better.