“Business ethics can provide both direction and drive, as they are by necessity built on principles that are clear to follow. It promotes team spirit or even camaraderie in a common belief. Business ethics, albeit easier said than done, is achievable.”

WARREN McFARLAN

Baker Foundation Professor

Albert H Gordon

Professor of Business Administration

Senior Associate Dean

Director of Harvard Business School's Asia Pacific Initiative (2000-2004)

“The Harvard Club of Singapore has played a vital role in bringing Harvard Business School's research and course development to Asia for more than 25 years. The first case study on the Singapore Bus Company was written in 1982, which ultimately led to a series of cases on Tradenet and the inspirational stories of Singapore moving into the information age.”

PROFESSOR RICHARD VIETOR

John Heinz III Professor of Business Administration

*Senior Associate Dean,
Harvard Business School*

“Ive had the good fortune to teach more than 70 senior executives from Singapore. They are smart, hardworking and dedicated. Surely this is one reason why Singapore has developed so quickly into such a strong and stable economy.”

“The business of leadership education at Harvard is the foundation to face the unforeseen challenges in the evolution of markets and competition in the global landscape. In the late 1960s, as a faculty member at HBS, I honed my art of asking incisive questions that bring out the best of MBAs. The Socratic method of inquiry is an invaluable institution.”

DR RAM CHARAN

MBA'65 DBA'67

Co-author of three bestsellers: Execution, Confronting Reality and Profitability is Everybody's Business

Rated Top 10 In-house Executive Program Teacher to corporations including CitiGroup

“What I have retained from the Advanced Management Programme is not so much the course content itself, but rather the stimulation of different nationalities and cultures gathering together at Harvard to learn much about one another—a constant reminder that in business and play, mutual understanding is what makes the world go round.”
