Aptitude-based Admissions (ABA) take into account students' passions, interests and strengths. Applicants with exceptional talents and/or outstanding achievements beyond schools' co-curricular activities can be considered, subject to a minimum level of academic competence, for admissions under ABA. Academic grades of relevant subjects may be an indication of aptitude as well. If you have one or more of the following achievements, you are encouraged to provide details under ABA section of the application form:

- Winner at the International Olympiads or in the National Science & Talent Search
- Significant awards/achievements in area relevant to the programme applied

- Active involvement/participation in community services and/or volunteering work
- Demonstrated excellence in areas such as leadership, entrepreneurship, arts & culture, sports, etc.
- Demonstration of aptitude/passion through portfolio relevant to the programme applied for. This can include competition, project and activity/programme undertaken in the related field of study. The key emphasis is relevance to the field of programme study applied in addition to the relevant subject/s taken.
- Made significant contributions or attained outstanding achievements in area of work or internship relevant to the programme applied

In addition to providing information above, applicants must submit an essay of not more than 500 words under ABA section of the application form and at least 1 (maximum 2) appraisal online to support their applications. Shortlisted candidates may be required to attend an interview and present relevant supporting documents for verification upon request.

* Carded Athletes are athletes who have been nominated for the High Performance Sports (HPS) based on their profile of the past 12 months (1 Jan to 31 Dec) performance / potential to achieve at the Major games. The Singapore Sports Institute (SSI) evaluates and categorizes nominated athletes based on their achievements in local and international competitions.
